OLDER citizens of our community who have watched events at Little Rock march toward legalization of horse-racing and liquor may be moved to remark that the world is going to hell anyway—so let her go! You, perhaps, put your faith in laws. But I put my faith in prosecutors and the police. Good men in office as prosecutors and policemen don't really need any more law than the Ten Commandments. You can build a civilization in the wilderness with as little law as that—for America did!

Immense Crowd to Attend Opening of Race Meet Friday

Entire Officialdom of Little Rock Heads for Hot Springs

STATE TO COLLECT

Revenue Men Move in Upon Horse-Racing Plant, Now Legalized

HOPE, SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—Legal horse-racing returned to Arkansas Friday in a gala Washington birthday program inaugurating Hot Springs' 31-day meet at historic Oakland park. Turf followers from all sections invaded Arkansas' health resort to join in a celebration which officials expected to attract 15,000 persons for the first program.

Everyone There

HOPE, SPRINGS, Ark.—An immense crowd is expected to be present in the big Oakland racing plant Friday afternoon when the bugle summons the field of 12 sprinters to the barrier for the first race that will open a program of 31 racing days, and which will inaugurate the first legal racing here in more than 25 years.

Reservations received indicate that the capital in Little Rock will be bereft of officials and that it also will be hard to locate in that city any one holding office in Little Rock or Pulaski county.

Visitors are coming from all sections of the state. Memphis is sending two special trains, partly in tribute to C. Leroy King, the bluff city traction magnate, whose two horses, My Guy and Hecla, are entered in the inaugural and feature race of the afternoon, which is named in honor of Mayor Leo P. McLaughlin.

More than 2,000 persons were at the track Thursday watching the workouts. Several interesting sprints occurred. The track is lightning fast.

About $25,000 has been spent on the plant since the meeting last year. Henry Schrader, general superintendent, has achieved rather picturesque results.

Next time Friday is 2:30 General Manager Joseph E. Martin requests that those who intend to witness the racing be inside the grounds by that time. Two moving picture companies with sound trucks will operate and, given nice weather, the event will be recorded in movies.

Bess Crump Praises Governor

Douglas Hotchkiss, member of the Arkansas State Racing Commission and secretary of the Hot Springs Business Men's Racing Association, who has been buried in correspondence since his appointment, took time out Thursday to say that of all the letters he received none gave him greater satisfaction than the one that came from Ed H. Crump, Memphis political leader. Hotchkiss and his wife were so pleased at the compliment paid Governor Futrell.

"Your governor displayed wisdom and courage in legalizing racing. My

15 County Meets to Be Held Next Week by the AAA

Terms of 1935 Acreage Contracts Will Be Explained Locally

AAA RECORD WEEK

Record Books Are to Be Set Up on 2,000 Hempstead Farms

County Agent, Frank R. Stanley, has announced 15 meetings in the county to explain the provisions in the 1935 cotton acreage reduction contract. These meetings are to give the farmers the proper information regarding contracts and all should make an effort to be present.

The meetings are to be held in connection with Farm Record Book Week.

Farm Record Week

The week of February 25 to March 3 has been designated as "Farm Record Week" throughout Arkansas and Hempstead county. During this week 2,000 farmers will be given record books, and the books they kept last year will be collected. Throughout the week farmers will meet at various community centers to hear discussed the use of farm records and how to keep them.

The AAA is furnishing every contract signer a record book free, which is apart of the contract between the signer and the AAA and is for the purpose of providing compliance to contracts and serve as a basis for future contracts that may be offered farmers by the government.

In the case of record books distributed and kept last year, the books to be given out will be collected at the end of the year and the data contained in them will be analyzed and used as a basis for future programs.

A series of 15 county meetings have been arranged for dates and communities listed below and it is desired that every farmer who has signed a contract be present at the meeting nearest him sometime during the week.

List of Meetings

Meetings will be held in the following communities on the dates and at the time listed:

February 26, Tuesday—Patmos, Spring Hill, Guernsey, Fulton, 7 p. m.

February 27, Wednesday—Columbus, Blevins, McCaskill, Washington, 7 p. m.

February 28, Thursday—Finney Grove, Beard's Chapel, 2 p. m.

Hope Negro Shot Fatally by Wife

Sam D. Thomas, 45, Killed, and Stella Surrenders to Police

Sam D. Thomas, 45-year-old Hope negro, was shot and killed at 11 o'clock Friday morning at his home on South Laurel street. His wife, Stella, was held in the city jail as the slayer.

Thomas was shot once with a .28 calibre pistol. The bullet entered just above the heart. He died instantly. At first it was believed he had been shot in the head. An examination of the body at Hope Furniture company morgue showed that the bullet entered above the heart.

Officer John Turner was among the first to reach the scene of the shooting. Then negro was sprawled on the kitchen floor. A pool of blood was nearby. The room was disarranged, showing evidence of a fight.

The slayer had fled. Neighbors told of seeing the negro's wife leave the house after a report of a gun shot, a trail was picked up a few hundred yards away. It led to a negro house about half a mile from the scene of the shooting.

Covered in the house, the negro woman walked out and surrendered at the command of Officer Turner. She readily admitted the shooting. She asked only one question:

"Was it fatal?"

Told that her husband was dead, she kept her composure and told of the quarrel and fight that led to the shooting.

"I had prepared dinner. He had come home early, but I had dinner ready. He seemed to be in a bad mood. We quarreled. He beat me and abused me. Finally, I couldn't stand it.

"I reached under the bed-mattress. I got the pistol. I shot him."

5 Million Dollars in Appropriations Up to Legislature

General Bills for State Departments Make Their Appearance

EQUAL TO '33 TOTAL

Meanwhile, Governor Futrell Urges Action on Liquor Question

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The house opened its session Friday with short exercises commemorating the birth of George Washington, and then plunged into its business.

It quickly approved a senate amendment to a bill to bar, under circumstances, the inchoat right of dower of married women on real property.

Senator W. L. Ward, of Lee county, was the principal speaker at the house's Washington birthday observance, making a short oration on Washington's life.

Dallas T. Herndon, secretary of the Arkansas History Commission, read a short thesis on the battles of Pea Ridge and Elkhorn Tavern.

The house then completed action on a mass of amendments to the senate bills.

The senate in quick succession passed a dozen bills during the first two hours of its session, most of them of minor or local importance.

The most important was a house bill which would make all roads leading to state parks a part of the state highway system.

Appropriations Bills

About half of the biennial general appropriations bills were introduced in both houses by the joint budget committee.

These bills have been awaited by the legislature for nearly a week, and from now on are privileged matters and take right-of-way over all other business.

The appropriations compare with the biennial appropriations of two years ago and are based upon present revenues or estimates of present revenues.

The other half of the appropriations bills will be introduced Monday.

The house, as its final action Friday morning, passed a bill which seeks to provide that the constitutionality of state laws shall be tested in the state courts.

As explained by Carter, of Miller county, the bill seeks to prevent corporations going into federal courts to test state laws before exhausting their rights in the state tribunals.

Total of 5 Million

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Thirty-six appropriations bills calling for an expenditure of $5,337,356.48 for the operation of more than a score of state departments were introduced in both branches of the legislature Friday by the budget committee.

The bills were placed on the calendar in the respective houses and made subject to immediate consideration.

Seventeen bills were introduced in the senate calling for the expenditure of $2,293,100, and 19 calling for $3,043,955 were introduced in the house.

Urges Liquor Action

LITTLE ROCK.—Governor Futrell Thursday called upon the legislature to modify gambling and liquor laws or to give the circuit courts extraordinary powers to enforce them in a "supreme test of law enforcement."

As an alternative to controlled gambling and sale of liquor, he suggested a set-up of independent investigators to be appointed in the discretion of circuit judges to substitute for sheriffs and prosecuting attorneys, an appropriation of $250,000 for the work, and legislative impeachment of judges who fail to do their duties.

The liquor bills have been made, special orders for Monday in both branches of the assembly. In the house, an eastern Arkansas faction which is dissatisfied with the personnel of the Racing Commission has threatened to defeat liquor legislation unless concessions are made by the governor with regard to the horse-racing administrative body.

Enforcement Suffers

The governor's message to both branches of the legislature was in part as follows:

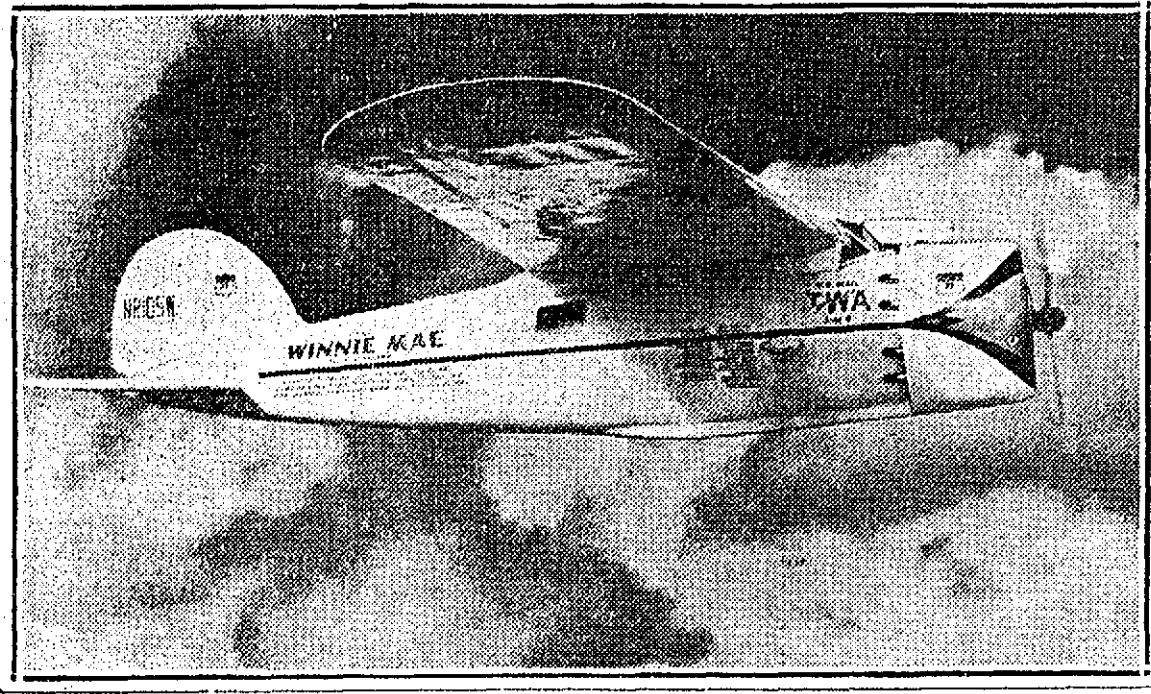

"Enforcement of the anti-gambling and liquor laws began to break down several years ago and has progressed to a collapse at the present time. This has seriously affected the enforcement of all laws.

"After much consideration, it is my opinion that these laws should be so modified as to secure a general support of the public. It is my sincere belief that a proper liquor control law will improve conditions very substantially. If the experiment should prove to be unsuccessful, I would call this legislature into special session to undo what had been done.

"If it is the view of the legislature that we should have no whisky control law, then the question becomes very acute: 'What shall be done?' Conditions are horrible and demoralizing. Can we afford to take the position of

House Holds Fate of F. D.'s Program

Senate Vote Has Crippled 4-Billion-Dollar Work Relief Plan

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A bulky three-to-one Democratic majority in the house was the administration's major hope Friday for a come-back against the seven senate jobs which were a "prevailing wage" requirement into the work relief bill Thursday.

A last line of defense remained for the administration should the house side with the senate—a presidential veto.

The struggle over the 4-billion-dollar relief bill was the chief concern of the capital as Washington celebrated the first president's birthday.

Administration Beaten

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Despite the threat of a presidential veto, the senate forced the McCarran prevailing wage amendment into the president's $1,886,000,000 relief bill Thursday, 44 to 43, and left Democratic leaders in a quandary. The White House was silent.

The adverse vote came shortly after the reading of a letter from President Roosevelt, giving assurance that wage scales in private industry would not be permitted to be lowered because of the $30 a month "security wage" contemplated for relief workers.

The ballot in favor of "prevailing wages" was the first major test of administration strength on the controversial measure and was reached only after two days of heated debate between the Roosevelt wheel-horses and the organized labor group headed by Senator McCarran, Democrat, Nevada.

Deciding Ballot

For a while administration forces had the amendment defeated by a tie vote, but just before the decision was to be announced Senator Frazier, Republican, North Dakota, entered the chamber and swung the decision for the amendment by voting aye.

Some senators gave credit to Huey Long of Louisiana for the administration defeat. Just before the vote was announced he secured a pair for Senator Dickinson, Republican, Iowa, and Mrs. Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, who was absent. Under the "pair" arrangement one senator for and one senator against a question agree that their votes not be counted in the tally.

Long ran across the senate chamber and held a hurried conference with Dickinson. Then, when Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, who is Mrs. Caraway's colleague, questioned the pair, Long insisted he had the authority to make the arrangement. Had Mrs. Caraway's vote not been so fixed the result would have been a tie and that would have killed the amendment.

After the day's session, Glass, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said so far as he knew there was no move to reconsider the vote. Some Democrats, however, held hope that the amendment would be eliminated when the measure is sent to conference with the house, probably next week.

Patman Petitions for Vote on Bonus

Obtains 64 of Necessary 217 Signatures in Lower Chamber

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A new, stringent secrecy rule was invoked, criticized and promptly liberalized Thursday by house leaders as backers of the $2,000,000,000 Patman bonus pay-off bill moved to assure consideration of the measure.

Representative Patman, Democrat, Texas, filed a petition to force a house vote on his bill in event it is blocked in committee. Within two hours, he had obtained 64 of the necessary 217 signatures.

But when his petition was filed, word was passed around to house employees that they could not tell newspapermen how many names were on the petition, or even that it had been presented.

A number of house members protested. Representative Kvale, Farmer-Labor, Minnesota, asserting off the floor: "That is wrong. It doesn't conform either with the spirit or the letter of house rules."

Kennamer Guilty; Term Up to Judge

Sentence for Murderer to Be Decided Upon Saturday Afternoon

PAWNEE, Okla.—(AP)—Phil Kennamer was convicted of manslaughter Thursday night for the Thanksgiving night slaying of John Gorrell Jr.

The jury left his fate to Judge Thurman Hurst, who will pass sentence at 2 p. m. Saturday. The term may be from four to 99 years.

Kennamer, 19 year of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer, received the verdict more calmly than his father, and patted the small, elderly man on the shoulder. His friends crowded around him to shake his hand before he was taken back to the county jail.

A motion for new trial will be entered when he is sentenced.

The jury deliberated about seven hours.

The case, involving some of Tulsa's best known families, went to the jury of rural Oklahomans at 11:45 a. m. Judge Hurst, instructed the 12 jurors and laborers they might assess the death penalty if they believed young Kennamer guilty of premeditated murder.

After three older state prosecutors before him had asked only imprisonment in the face of the combined defense of insanity and self-defense, W. F. (Dixie) Gilmer, drew an excited murmur from the crowded courtroom when he concluded the final argument shouting:

"He killed in cold blood. I demand that you exact his life just as Phil Kennamer shot and killed John Gorrell in Tulsa last Thanksgiving night."

Blevins Man Is Held on Charge of Rape

Jack Foster of Blevins, was held under bond Friday for the alleged rape of a 15-year-old Blevins girl.

The alleged rape, according to Sheriff Bearden, occurred last Sunday night on the Hope-Emmett road. Foster will be given a hearing Monday in municipal court at Hope.

Wiley Post Lands Safe in Desert in Trial for Record

'Round-the-World Flier and His Ship Crash From 40,000 Feet

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Wiley Post's projected sub-stratosphere flight across the continent after a new speed record, ended in a forced landing in the Mojave desert Thursday.

Post was unhurt and his ship was but slightly damaged.

Post streaked off into the stratosphere from the Los Angeles airport at dawn on a flight which he expected would carry him to New York City—planning to land there on the belly of his ship.

He dropped his landing gear just after the take-off, the "Winnie Mae" being equipped with spruce skids at the bottom of her fuselage.

It was Post's aim to prove that in the thin air of the stratosphere, at a height of 40,000 feet or greater, tremendous speed could be developed, paving the way for use of sealed air-liners which could cross the continent in half the present time of 1½ hours.

The epitaph was spoken one recent evening when Bernard M. Baruch, the financier, telephoned Senator Vandenberg of the Nye munitions committee and is said to have confessed: "Well, that's about the last you're going to hear from the president's commission, I guess."

Baruch and Gen. Hugh Johnson, the committee's key men, had just endorsed the McSwain war mobilization bill before the house military affairs committee. The commission itself included many high government officials, especially those of the War and Navy departments.

It was widely considered a means of stopping further Nye committee revelations. It was charged with making a survey and recommendation as to war profits. But the Nye committee rebelled and the commission

Keep Your Face Clean and Prevent Acne

Whenever the least little pimple or blemish appears on your face or scalp, don't try to pick at it with your fingers, no matter how clean they may be. Doing so may make the condition worse and cause the spread of what is generally called acne.

Acne usually refers to that type of eruption which comes on in young men and women in the period between youth and manhood and womanhood. The scalp is scaly, the skin slightly greasy, and marked by a considerable number of blackheads and pimples. Sometimes these pimples break, form crabs, and leave either tiny pits in the skin, or scars.

Since this condition is associated usually with an infection by germs which are almost constantly present on the skin, cleanliness is of greatest importance.

It is particularly important that the material from the scalp does not spread down over the face. If there is much infection on the forehead, the hair should be kept short.

Plenty of good soap and warm water is of great help in this condition. Soft water is preferable and any good non-irritating soap will help to clear up a greasy, scaly skin.

If a cloth is used in washing the face, this cloth should be boiled each time after use and a new cloth should be taken frequently. It is sometimes helpful in such cases to apply repeated hot towels or to steam the face.

The flow of perspiration carries with it a good deal of infected material. After a series of such hot applications, it is well to apply cold briefly, to contract the swollen blood vessels and pores.

The question often is raised about the use of makeup on a face frequently covered with pimples and blackheads. Makeup will do no harm if it is completely removed each evening and applied freshly the next day.

The lotions used on the face preferably should include those that are antiseptic by their content of alcohol, and which are at the same time astringent.

In many cases, it will be found that persons with acne are constipated and that they overeat. Both of these conditions should be corrected.

There are many cases in which the condition is very resistant and in which the skin needs to have its resistance stimulated. This can be accomplished sometimes by suitable treatment applied to the blood, including the injection of nonspecific proteins.

In other cases, the condition may be helped by right use of the X-ray.

A BOOK A DAY

Deplets Mob's Side of Revolution

Almost every self-respecting novelist has had a crack at the French Revolution, and the affair has been served up, fictionally, with all kinds of emotional sauce.

But basically the attitude of all these novels is the same; the terrorist and the unwashed mobs are the villains, and the victims of the guillotine are the heroes and heroines with the Little Corporal emerging occasionally as the instrument of divine justice.

We get a new slant at last in "The Black Corsair," by Anatoli Vinogradov. This author is a red Russian and his sympathies are with the proletariat. Robespierre and Marat are his heroes and the men and women they killed are the villains.

The tragedy of the affair is seen not in its terror and bloodshed, but in the reactions that brought the Directory and Napoleon to power.

The novel is chiefly concerned with the revolution in Haiti, where the black slaves heard about liberty and fraternity, pushed their French masters into the ocean and under Toussaint L'Ouverture, established an independence which has been maintained to this day except for occasional United States marine corps interludes.

The book, then, is the story of this remarkable negro, Toussaint, and of Robespierre and Marat.

It becomes a bit dull in the middle,

Payroll Tax Will Open at 1 Per Cent

To Increase to 3 Per Cent in 1938—Stationary Thereafter

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Significant changes which some members said might serve to offset claims of unconstitutionality were written Wednesday by the house ways and means committee into the unemployment insurance section of the social security bill. Still other changes were in sight. These agreed upon were accepted only after nearly two hours of discussion, although committee members said they had at least partial administration approval.

The major alteration provides stipulations that, regardless of business conditions, the tax to supply funds for unemployment insurance should be one per cent for the 1936 calendar year, rising to two per cent in 1937 and three per cent in 1938.

As first drafted, the bill would have made possible a maximum three per cent federal tax on total pay rolls, the money to be kept in a trust fund. If business the first year was below 84 per cent of the 1923-25 average, the tax would have been one per cent; if less than 95 per cent the second year, it would have been two per cent, rising automatically to three per cent in the third year.

Witnesses before the committee had testified that such a variable levy might have harmful effects and be declared unconstitutional.

Furthermore, it was said by committee members, the bill would extend federal aid to states which set up their own unemployment insurance systems. Therefore, it was contended the fixing of a definite instead of a variable tax would help legislators in deciding what kind of a system to adopt.

The committee as yet, however, has not answered the primary unconstitutionality argument advanced by the National Association of Manufacturers.

In its present form, the bill would let employers have a 90 per cent credit against their federal tax on any money they had paid to a state unemployment insurance fund. Manufacturers argued that the credit showed the federal tax was designed primarily to force establishment of state insurance systems.

In effect, the committee Wednesday approved the 90 per cent credit although it deferred final action.

because the author insists on quoting verbatim, for page after page, from revolutionary speeches and documents of the time, but in the main it is a tragic and moving book well worth reading.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Most Liked Child Is Likely to Be Spoiled

Very often in a family there is a "preferred" child. Parents are likely to refuse this statement and honestly enough, too, because they will not admit the truth even to themselves. A mother or father would be horrified to think there is any difference in their feelings toward their children.

However, it so happens, without any reflection on them, that individuality and personality count in our relationships with children's, one's own not accepted, as it does with other people. It is just as well not to acknowledge it, as it happens, because the less we accent this difference the better for everybody concerned. It is a bitter thing for Mary to discover that her mother loves Johnny best. And a cruel thing for Johnny to know that his father has a much softer spot for his sister than for him.

Now any children are not apt to sense any shading of difference in their treatment, if it happens to exist. But there is an important matter along this line that definitely affects the pre-school child.

I think it can best be illustrated by taking a family I knew pretty well and what happened with the middle child.

There were three children. All of them had illnesses, and serious ones, but the oldest and youngest got better without much dramatization.

Every time Clare got sick he was babied and petted considerably. He was not sick much oftener than the others, but in some way it wrung his mother's heart just a little more. She would talk about her "poor Cloddy" and how he just got everything.

And as is the way after almost any sickness with little ones, he escaped the general discipline of the house a good bit of the time. In his case these intervals were lengthened. And little tasks the others had to face and accept were never assigned him. Discipline in his case was relaxed.

Sister and Brother, Too

He was not spoiled as much as one might think, however. He had a naturally sweet disposition and an ingrained sense of justice that saved him. His sister and brother, instead of resenting him, learned to share their mother's attitude that he must be treasured. They, too, took up the "poor Cloddy" theme. And the cousins and the aunts. He grew up to be a healthy fine boy. But the family hardly ever mentioned his name without that affectionate "poor" attached to it.

In time he was the one chosen for an education. Not that he was better qualified, but the effort was concentrated on him.

One fine day the rest of the family woke up to the fact. All but his dear mother (she really was a very fine woman). The other children married and so did he. They had their struggles and their tribulations. But every time something happened to "poor Cloddy" it spread through the family. Just one more trial for the unlucky lad. Deep sighs.

Now Resents Easy Childhood

He hated it. Still hates it. I believe he resents it more now than ever. He sees that this too-ready sympathy undermined his self reliance. For long years it put him in the baby class. Now he looks back and sees that he became a fatalist without the spirit to fight when he needed to fight. Had he not been of rather good stuff the experience would have been ruinous. As for his mother, she herself suffered too much and too often, vicariously, through this favored child. It could have been spared her.

Be sure that this will always happen if emotion concentrates too abnormally on one child. It cannot always be helped, but when a mother examines herself and knows the situation, she can generally do something about it.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Intricate Hairdress Easy to Fix at Home

Those nice little ringlets, fashionable though they are and certainly flattering to almost any head, are pretty difficult to keep in place. You start out with rows of them framing your face and the back of your head, but by the time you get to a place, the high collar of your evening wrap or the rubber band that holds your shallow hat or your head has completely ruined it.

Right then, you know perfectly well that you'll have to go back to the hairdresser again in the morning or else go around looking like a frump until your next weekly visit. It's all been rather discouraging and a good many girls who really like ringlets have given them up on account of the trouble they cause.

Realizing this, one smart manufacturer has created a little metal gadget that anyone can use to make ringlets right at home. Easy to hold in the hand and simple to manage once you get used to the idea, this contraption is a far cry from the old type metal curlers that you had to leave on all night.

Take enough hair to make one ringlet, moisten it with warm water, roll it up on the curler, carefully ringlet the curler and then pin the ringlet in place with a bobby pin. Repeat until you have made all the little curls you need. Don't remove the bobby pins until the ringlets are dry.

This method doesn't injure the hair in any way and can be used as often as you like.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 25, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris to enter the mill. Gale disappears before he can leave for home.

VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to capture Brian.

Gale and Steve quarrel, later make up.

Vicky tells Brian she wants to get acquainted with the mill workers, on the pretense of helping them. He is pleased, agrees to take her to see Gale. Next evening Gale, who is expecting Brian, opens the door and faces Vicky.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXII

VICKY smiled from beneath the insolently slanting hat brim. She said, "How do you do. May we come in?"

"Why—why, yes," Gale said. Her eyes once again sought Brian's, questioning, trying to hide the hurt that was in them. "Yes, do come in."

She stepped back and they entered the house. Brian said, "Gale, this is Vicky Thatcher. Vicky—Gale Henderson. I know you're going to like each other, going to be friends. Vicky's come to ask a favor of you, Gale."

Vicky had turned and was surveying the room. Gale, watching her, suddenly saw it all with this stranger's eyes—the faded carpet, worn threadbare before the door and in front of the place where her father's big chair stood; the old-fashioned wall paper that should have been replaced long ago.

Suddenly, she remembered herself and said, "Won't you sit down?"

"Thank you," Vicky dropped to the chair that was nearest, sat forward and gathered her coat about her. Gale noticed the gesture, ever so slight and yet completely aloof.

Vicky turned to the young man and said, "Cigaret, Brian."

He rose and held out the open case. He offered it to Gale, too, but she declined. A moment later he flicked a lighter and held the blaze for Vicky.

Brian said, "Well, better tell Gale what you've come for."

"The dark eyes with their unbelievably long fringes rose to his. "Please, Brian," Vicky said, "you put everything so much better than I do. You explain it."

said, "It's very kind of Miss Thatcher—"

Brian moved one hand disparagingly. "That's not the idea," he said. "She doesn't want to go at this as though it were charity. It isn't. She's got time on her hands and wants to find a way to use it to help someone else. She's just—well, trying to help out. I think myself it's a fine thing. We came to you because I couldn't think of anyone better to take her around and introduce her. Will you do that?"

Gale hesitated. She had remembered that afternoon in Brian's office when Vicky had opened the door and seen her weeping. Did Vicky remember? Had she recognized her? And what possible construction had she put on the situation? The thought made Gale uncomfortable, just as the sight of Vicky in her fur and her audacious hat, sitting in that shabby room with her knees crossed and swinging one French-heeled foot made her uncomfortable.

But Brian was waiting for her to say something.

"I'll be glad to do anything I can," Gale said. She studied the other girl. Vicky didn't look to Gale like anyone who could be very helpful in the mill village. She couldn't imagine her bathing the Dinwiddies' baby or sitting beside Grandpa Higgins, whose fondness for chewing tobacco was always evidenced by the spots on his shirt. Vicky didn't even look like a person who wanted to be helpful.

VICKY was not looking at her. She didn't seem to be listening. She said, "Oh, Brian—I must have left my purse in your car!"

"I'll get it," he said, on his feet. "Be back in a moment."

Vicky watched the door close behind him. She lifted her head slightly, smiled a sulky smile. "Brian's sweet, isn't he?" she said.

Vicky nodded. "Everyone thinks so," she agreed. "And so good-looking, too. I don't suppose I should tell you—but I'm going to. It's supposed to be an absolute secret, and you must promise not to tell!"

She hesitated. Gale sat watching her. She didn't know what it was that had happened but suddenly she was afraid to move, afraid to breathe. There was something fearful in the air.

The other girl went on. "It's supposed to be a secret," she said again, "but I know you'll keep it for us. Brian and I are going to be married!"

Cold, cruel eyes watched the other girl. "I've even set the date of the wedding," Vicky went on, mercilessly. "That is, it's going to be in June some time. I think June weddings are much the nicest, don't you?"

Gale's lips moved but no words came. She tried again and said, "Oh—oh, yes."

"I don't suppose anyone will really be surprised about it," Vicky went on. "That is, our friends, I mean. There was the faintest perceptible accent on the

"our." "You see, it's really a boy and girl affair. Ever since we were children it's been taken for granted that this would happen some time. And the relatives—Brian's family and mine—are both so pleased."

Vicky stopped suddenly. "Why, for goodness sake," she exclaimed, "you're white as a sheet! Is there anything wrong? You look as though you'd had a shock—"

"I'm quite all right," Gale said. The words sounded to her ears as though they came from a great way off. "I hope you'll be very happy."

"Well, thank you," Vicky was smiling again. "And I'm sure we will be. Everyone says we're so well suited to each other. It's on account of Brian that I'm here tonight. He's so wrapped up in the mill and I want to be interested in whatever he is. I think a husband and wife—of course we aren't that now, but we're going to be—should share the same interests, don't you?"

Gale was spared from answering. The door opened and Brian reappeared. He said, "Sorry, Vicky, but I hunted all over the car and I couldn't find that purse. You're sure you had it with you—?"

Vicky nodded. "Yes," she said. "I remember." And then she stopped. "Oh, Brian," she went on, "I believe I did leave it at home. I remember laying it on my dressing table and then coming downstairs. I must have forgotten to go up for it again. I'm terribly sorry!"

"Doesn't matter, as long as you're sure it isn't lost. Well, have you two girls got everything settled? Made all your plans?"

"I'm afraid not," Vicky told him, smiling. "We've been so busy chattering and getting acquainted, I'm afraid we did forget to talk about anything else. She turned toward Gale. "But you're going to let me come again, aren't you?"

"Come whenever you want to," Gale told her. "Come any time."

"That's sweet of you!" Vicky got to her feet. "Don't you think we'd better be going on now?" she said to Brian.

"If you're ready."

"Then I'll say good night." Vicky pulled her coat together, put out one of her hands and took Gale's. She said, sweetly, "I think you've been awfully nice about everything and I'm sure we're going to be great friends!"

Gale's eyes avoided Brian. She said, "Good night" and heard the door close behind them. For an instant she stood, staring at the chair where Vicky had sat. There was a sound behind her and she turned. Brian stood in the doorway.

He said, "Gale, if I come back can I see you alone?"

"Please—," she said, "I wish you'd go away!"

"But Gale—?"

"Will you please go?" She heard the door close for the second time.

HOLLYWOOD GOSSIP

—BY DAN THOMAS—

George Raft Opens Up About the Prince.

HOLLYWOOD.—After five years of tight-lipped silence, George Raft finally revealed the real facts of his acquaintanceship with the Prince of Wales.

Ever since George first arrived in Hollywood, there have been various and conflicting reports on this subject. And how most of our stars have envied the dark, sleek-haired actor! Most of them would give practically anything just to meet the prince. And how they would embellish the tale of that meeting! But not George.

Although he has talked freely on every other event in his life, anything pertaining to his meeting with the prince has until now been strictly taboo. He even refused to confirm or deny the numerous rumors which from time to time floated into town.

He probably wouldn't have talked yet if I hadn't happened to catch him in a weak moment. He had just finished a hard day's work on "Stolen Harmony" and we were enjoying a refreshing drink in his studio dressing room. Like the constant dripping of water from a leaky eaves trough, I kept plying him with question about his association with His Royal Highness.

"All right, all right, I give up," he finally replied in a weary voice. "First of all, perhaps I should say that it was a cigar lighter and not a cigar case that the prince gave me."

"We met when I was dancing in the Mousetrap Club in London. After I finished my number, I was handed a note from the prince, asking me to join his party. I always have had plenty of self-assurance, but believe me, I didn't know what to say. So I just sat at the table saying nothing. Later that night, as the party was breaking up, the prince invited me to accompany him to his town residence."

"I'll Early Morning
"We sat there and talked for about three hours. He wanted to know all about Arnold Rothstein. Al Capone, Flo Zeigfeld, and others whom he knew only through newspaper stories. I had met them all and told him everything I knew about them."

As the hour grew late, or perhaps I should say early, Raft remarked that he would like to see more of England, but, as his act was about to close, the immigration authorities probably would send him home.

"How would you like to stay here and teach me to dance?" asked the prince. "You can spend an hour a day with me and have the rest of the time to look over the country-side."

"That offer practically floored me," related George. "Naturally I jumped at the chance. For several weeks I visited York House every day. After a time I felt free to loosen up a bit in my conversation and after our various sessions we discussed various topics over whisky and soda. That continued up to the time I returned to this country."

Despite that association, however, George makes no claims about being a friend of the prince. As far as he is concerned, the whole thing is a closed incident.

In fact, if he were to meet the prince tomorrow, he would make no attempt to speak until the prince recognized him.

Then he sent the picture to Studio Manager William Koenig, with a note reading: "Will you please give a poor actor at least a place to hang his clothes?"

He got the new dressing room.

may be gotten ready ahead of time and you can have many more guests than for any other occasion since they don't all come at once.

Ask close friends to pour for you. Serve coffee at one end of the table and tea at the other. Sugar and cream are placed at the coffee end and sugar, cream and lemon and orange slices at the tea end. The guests help themselves to the sandwiches and cakes placed between.

Two big trays of assorted sandwiches, one at each end of the table, and two cakes on either side of the centerpiece make a well balanced arrangement.

Have the sandwiches thin, some open-faced, and cut in shapes. Thinly cut baked ham with a slice of cherry in the center makes an attractive round open sandwich. Be sure to cream the butter well and use enough to keep the ham in place. Highly seasoned butters, cream cheese, nuts and cherry make good sandwich fillings.

Neighbor Fined for Stealing Servant

British Courts Severe on Man Who Enticed Domestic Help

PL—Neighbor Fined.—LONDON, Eng.—A man may not entice a maid away from his neighbor. It is not only wrong under the Tenth but under English laws.

It cost Alexander Frederick Church, 311 Elm of Cockham Dean, Berkshire, $125 to find that out in civil court. It cost him $1,250 more for sending the neighbor, Herbert M. Stretch, borrowed money from the maid, Edith Saville, who is known as England's model maid.

On top of all that, Sin was ordered to pay the costs of the lawsuit amounting to $2,000.

The case attracted attention from most Englishmen and women, who always have a hard time getting and keeping maids.

Continent Flight Record Is Broken

Transport Pilot Flies Los Angeles to Newark in 11½ Hours

NEWARK, N. J.—(AP)—The transcontinental record for transport airplanes was lowered by 21 minutes Thursday by LeRoy S. Andrews, who flew from Los Angeles to New York in 11 hours, 34 minutes and 42 seconds, in the same American Airlines plane his brother-in-law, Maj. James R. Doolittle, used in setting the previous record of 11 hours, 55 minutes, January 15.

"We would have made better time if we had used our radio better," the 42-year-old pilot said, "several times we got a little off the course."

Glass Flays Gold Policy of Party

Virginian Ties Up With Connally, of Texas, in Bitter Debate

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Supreme Court's gold decision became "nu" up in national politics Thursday night and loomed as an irrespressible issue for the 1936 presidential campaign.

That result was made inevitable, many thought, by a statement from Herbert Hoover, titular head of the Republican party, urging a return to the monetary standards of other days. A tumultuous debate too place on the senate floor involving two Democrats, Glass of Virginia and Connally of Texas.

Glass, a conservative, waved a piece of paper before his hearers, demanded whether the promise it made could be kept and shouted:

"We are on a fiat currency basis."

Connally had called the Hoover pronouncement to the attention of the senate, with a statement that the former president was seeking a return to the same system "which brought his administration tumbling in ruins about him."

The nation, he asserted, already was on a gold standard and should avoid the old system "which brought destruction." This brought Glass, long at odds with the administration, to his feet.

After shouting his statement about fiat currency at the Texas, he added:

"And, following the decision of the Supreme Court, on a fiat bond basis."

"The Supreme Court has answered the senator from Virginia," Connally retorted.

"No, it hasn't answered me. The court said that what was written on those notes was a cheat and a repudiation and has said that in spite of this cheat and repudiation, if a holder of a note undertakes to get what is due him he can go to hell."

ARE YOU FEELING SLUGGISH?
Take Theodor's Black-Draught for constipation. What relief! That fresh feeling, that sparkle to the eyes, keen zest for work or a lively good time! There's nothing better than a clean system for health.

Mr. J. M. Cosper, of Benton, La., writes that when he gets up in the morning "feeling dull, tired, drowsy and all out of fix, with a bad taste in my mouth, I know I need something to clear me up. Black-Draught certainly does clear my system and make me feel fine."

It is purely vegetable, not costly. THEODOR'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

HARRY GRAYSON

While elaborate scouting systems of 16 major league clubs scour the land for talent, Frank J. Grayson says more good players have come into the game in recent years than ever before.

Perhaps it is because his Tigers won a pennant for the first time in 25 seasons.

"The stars of other years were good," explains the Detroit owner, "but if there had been more of them, there wouldn't have been such a fuss made over them. There are so many superlative players in baseball today that to stand out a player really has to be a superb workman."

"Years ago most players were slow. When a fast runner performed on the bare lines it was noticed. Today we have plenty of speedy men in the game."

"There are more good pitchers now. Teams face good pitchers in every game. In days gone by they faced one good pitcher perhaps in a series."

"Players today study the game more closely, keep in better condition, and try to improve."

ixteen big league managers will tell Navin that most of them still can stand considerable improvement.

If luminaries are so abundant, each wishes Navin would point out one or two or more who are without affiliation and who would enjoy a trip south.

Navin's own manager, Mickey Cochran, particularly would like to have his chief put the finger on a right-hand hitting outfielder and a reserve infielder worth his weight in gold.

George Theodoratos, giant Washington State tackle and weight man, is one of four American college athletes, sons of Greek-born parents, sailing for meets in Greece and the Near East on July 1.

The others are Peter Chelzos, Southern California pole vaulter and broad and high jumper; John Fatses, hurdler and broad jumper of New York University; and Tony Seratos, Michigan quarter-miler who also will run the 200 meters.

The quartet competes against an all-Greek team in Athens, participates in the Balkan Games in Constantinople, and appears in a meet at Alexandria and in several dual meets.

Anyway, Keep Eye on Ball

Max Carey disagrees with those who contend that golf destroys batting form.

"Golf improves the matter's eye," explains the former National League baserunning champion and more recent Brooklyn boss, who is to conduct a baseball school at Miami. "It aids his pivot at bat. The feel of striking a golf ball with a golf club is the same as striking a baseball with a bat."

"Many ball players do not hit well because they lack a follow through. This is just as necessary in baseball as it is in golf and they would learn it in golf."

Well, the Beef Was Good

Ankling down the corridor with several sports writers to a New York Athletic Club dinner in his honor, Lieut. Pat Echols, Army sports public relations counsel, was cordially greeted by William A. Dalton, head of the Winged Foot institution.

"You're going to the Echols dinner, aren't you?" asked President Dalton. "What's your name?"

"Echols!" chorused the sports writers.

And when the dashing lieutenant's trim form appeared in the doorway, a piano thumper struck up "Anchors Aweigh."

Fulton Man Has Age Pension Plan

$5 Scrip With Cancellation Tax of 2 Per Cent Suggested

Editor The Star: I want to explain a plan on how to finance old age pensions and the care of other dependants.

1. Have the state of Arkansas issue a state scrip in denominations of $5. Leave a blank line to write the name of the beneficiary on.

2. Make this scrip to each pensioner in the amount he has been allowed. Have the state print stamps 10-cent denomination.

3. Before this scrip check is negotiable a state stamp of 2 cents on the dollar must be placed on the back of this state scrip check and canceled each time the check changes hands until the face value of the scrip check is canceled out. Then this check can be sent in to the state treasurer and he will redeem it in United States currency.

4. The state could place money in each county treasury to redeem these checks. Anybody could buy these state stamps for the purpose of canceling out checks. This would be more convenient.

5. We can take care of the dependants this way and not hurt anybody. The national government could issue money in this way to be canceled out on the same basis and carry on the CWA work.

Cock-Fighting Is Forbidden by Law

Old Statute Prohibits It, Attorney General Advises Mayor

LITTLE ROCK—There is no ordinance against cock-fighting in Columbia, so Mayor T. C. Bridges wrote to the attorney general to ask if he could stop a merchant, under state law from putting on a rooster fight to attract customers and advertise his place of business.

"It is my opinion," wrote Guy E. Williams, assistant attorney general, "that the rooster fight which you complain about is a violation of the law, Section 2511, Crawford & Moses Digest. You will note that this comes under the heading of cruelty to animals."

The section makes it a misdemeanor to be connected with any place "for the purpose of fighting or baiting any bull, bear, dog, cock or other creature."

Tennessee Delays Vote on Sales Tax

Legislature Recedes to March 25 to Allow Fiscal Survey

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(P)—The Tennessee legislature recessed Thursday night March 25 to allow time for a fiscal committee to study the state's financial affairs and prepare recommendations.

Among matters to be considered is a sales tax. Gov. Hill McAlister had recommended a levy of three per cent on retail sales and one-fourth of one per cent on wholesale. The powerful Memphis delegation rose in opposition to Edward H. Crump, leader of the Memphis political organization, denounced it.

Wednesday in a surprise move, Speaker W. F. Moss, a strong ally of the administration, had the senate table the McAlister bill, which had the effect of virtually killing that particular measure as a two-thirds majority is required to recall a bill from the table. But another bill containing similar provisions may be introduced.

Moss said that he would not have moved the bill to the table "if the result would be that no sales tax could be considered." He added: "I certainly am not in favor of any move to kill a sales tax."

The speaker objected particularly to the administration's proposal because it would levy on wholesale sales and also on cotton. He declared that he wanted the recess committee to have a "free hand" in seeking revenue measures.

Tennessee has been called on to raise $2,500,000 a year for federal relief. The state also faces a treasury deficit.

Anyway, any hunter who can't bring down a wild fowl within three shots, the proposed limit for shotgun magazines, is no hunter; he's foul.

So Dizzy Dean signed up after all, showing that he can be dizzy in the way of everything but money.

Hawaii is being called the southwestern corner of the United States by those who seem capable of talking the intervening ocean dry.

Heavy water may be new to scientists, but not to the boy who has had to lag pail after pail of it from the well.

The elder Dionnes should be feted and advertised every new and then, if only to remind people that the quintuplets have parents.

Ostriches were first domesticated for their feathers in 1867, when the French established a farm in Algiers and exported ostrich feathers to Egypt. Since then successful ostrich farms have been established in many parts of the world.

At Death's Door

His smirk erased by the first glimpse of the prison's grim stone and steel facade, Bruno Hauptmann marched toward the end of the trail that has led him inexorably from his home in the Bronx toward the electric chair. Every trace of his one-time arrogance was gone when Hauptmann (second from left), manacled to the deputy sheriff behind him, climbed the steps of the New Jersey penitentiary at Trenton, N. J., where he became prisoner 14,700 and was placed in the death cell only six steps from the death chamber.

Tugwell to Stand by the President

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Reconsiders Resignation Threat

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Apparently reassured by President Roosevelt, Rexford G. Tugwell, undersecretary of Agriculture, told reporters on leaving the White House late Thursday that he intended to continue at his present post.

A flare-up of the liberal-conservative row at the AAA had led the youthful-looking administration advisor to consider quitting the department headed by Secretary Wallace.

Questioned as he left his conference with the president, however, Tugwell said he was remaining where he was. It is known that for weeks a feeling of loyalty to the president had caused him to refrain from more serious consideration of submitting his resignation.

It has been evident that Tugwell and Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, did not agree. Davis has been winning lately, if the resignations are any indication.

Tugwell at one time was known as "Brain-truster No. 1" and in consequence was anathema to conservative groups within and without the administration.

It is almost a certainty that he has been consulted on most of the major problems of the administration. How far his ideas have prevailed, has not been revealed.

He is referred to within administration circles as an "idea man," a man who frames tentative policies for the future America the president has in mind. Tugwell, a former Columbia University professor of economics, has made a specialty of social security, industrial unemployment and rural rehabilitation.

He has been very close to Secretary Wallace and a few speculated Thursday that Davis might be the one to go, with Tugwell remaining in his present post.

No one else in the government has rejected any of Harry Hopkins' gifts of exhibition pictures painted by W. A. artists. But Miss Perkins' office has been turning them back almost as fast as Hopkins can send them to decorate her magnificent new Labor building. Besides rejecting a painting of Steinmetz, the inventor, because "people would think it was Trotsky," and another painting because of a bit of female nudity, Miss Perkins has had removed.

Propaganda painting featuring the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Bronze sculpture of negro mother and child. "Because 'people might say she was more partial to negro labor than to white labor.'"

Roosevelt himself had ordered the sculpture cast in bronze and Miss Perkins asked for it. She changed her mind, remembering many southerners would be present for the building's formal opening, and also the great roar that came from the south when she remarked it would be a great boon for the boot and shoe industry if more people in the south wore shoes.

Patman Petitions

York, of the House Rules Committee agreed the original order was too strong, and it was changed to permit newspapermen to seek out how many members had signed the petition.

Patman emphasized he intended "no criticism" of the ways and means committee, before which his bill is pending. He said that when the necessary majority of the present membership had been obtained the right to force a house vote would not be invoked if the committee gave his bill "reasonable consideration."

Into the well with Patman went a score of members, seeking to set their names high up on the list of signers. Some Republicans, Progressives and all three Farm-Labor members signed.

Leaders, meanwhile, continued their "hanks-off" policy, declining to take sides in the dispute between advocates of the Patman and the American Legion bills. The former would pay the bill by issuing new currency; the latter would merely authorize an appropriation. Byrns said he "always had thought—and still thinks—that the house itself should be allowed to choose between the two."

It's Just Flattery

"The man I marry must be as brave as a lion, but no forward; handsome as Apollo, but not conceited; wise as Solomon, but meek as a lamb; a man who is kind to every woman, but loves only me."

"How lucky we met!"—Border Cities Star.

Immense Crowd to hat's off to him! As a rule we cheer the man who carries the ball—never the one who assists in clearing the way for him," wrote Mr. Crump.

"I now feel that I am thrillingly alive. Just the thought of the races is inspiring. I am filled with an eager desire to see the Hot Spring races. I have never had the pleasure, although I have seen horses run all over the country. I will surely be over."

Enrities in Inaugural

Thirteen horses will parade to the post in the Inaugural, the fifth event of the afternoon. Not all the owners had named their jockeys, but those that will start will prove plenty of "competition for the R. Robertson's noted Lynx Eye, which last year had things almost its own way. A notorious low breaker, and a horse that sometimes refuses to run, Lynx Eye will have to be up and on his way to match his speed with the fast-breakers he will face.

Mrs. J. L. Oglesby has nominated two horses, Norman D. and Her Gold. Both have been working exceptionally well. F. Ritz who has been riding a number of winners in New Orleans, will be up on Norman D. F. A. Riley has not announced a rider for his Kunka, a six-year-old bay mare, but L. Canfield will ride Counselor Crane. G. Riley will be in the pilot seat when Mr. Sponge goes to the post, but no boy has announced for his stable mate, Hecla.

One of the speediest of the lot, and a horse that gets going the moment the barrier is sprung, is Whisking, the J. H. Tate entry. Jockey Boucher will be aboard Whisking. W. Hoffman will take Joe Tunegan's place on Dusky Devil, and the five-year-old black colt that Trainer Tom Shannon has been developing here for the Blue Ridge Farm, should make it a race. F. Fernandez will ride Shoot, the entry of J. A. Dennis and son and W. E. Turner has announced that M. Knight will ride Biff, a well known stake and handicap winner. Olzie Sigman may be awaiting the arrival of F. E. Smith, who was a sensation at San Antonio, and if Smith gets here in time he may be placed aboard the Pelican, which will carry top weight.

Clyde Van Dusen, who made his heavy years ago as a jockey and who has had a number of horses on the grounds with those of the Diviana stable, has nominated Prince Torch for this event. Jockey L. Hale will ride the Prince.

State Hopes to Get Money

Hezekiah Highfill, from Blytheville, chairman of the Arkansas State Racing Commission will preside over the second meeting of the commission. Chairman Highfill expressed himself as satisfied with arrangements for the meeting.

Earl R. Wiseman, commissioner of revenues, had representatives here preparing to collect the state's share of the race meet profits. Paul Summers, chief deputy commissioner, after a conference with Commissioner Hotchkiss, said that he would have several men on hand to help make checks up on revenues and also to insist on the enforcement of the law. A law of a rule that no liquor will be sold on the grounds.

Ed Farris, secretary of the racing commission, Thursday told Hotchkiss that Griffin Smith, state comptroller, had volunteered the services of one of his assistants to make the checks in the mutual room for the Arkansas Racing Commission and that this official would serve in that capacity without additional cost, which will save quite a sum of expense during the meeting.
